Mr. Wm. Schmidt, of 1004 Coleman St., St. Louis, Mo., writes: I had Consumption in its worst form and was given up to die. One day I saw your Lung-Germine, I sent for it. Doctors and friends laughed at me, but I was determined to try this medicine as a last resort to deliver my life. I had a family of eight children to care for. To-day I am well and strong. If anyone has a doubt about this statement I am able to furnish proofs from different hospitals and doctors and other reliable men.

His Subjects' View of the Czar

By Warwick James Price

WHEN Archbishop Trench was writing his classic work on the study of words, he elaborated this statement: "When you would find true signs of a change of heart in any country look among the figures of speech of the lower classes."

By which criterion a present-day French scholar, after delving among the proverbs and sayings of the Russian muzhik, is producing evidence that the one-time serf no longer looks upon his Czar as God-appointed and infallible, of other clay than he himself, indeed; for where he once told his children that "When the Little Father spits into a dish it breaks in pieces through very pride," he now says, "The crown does not protect the Czar's head from headache," the whole broad change from the Russia of 1860 to the Russia of 1905 is there summed up.

Once the peasantry believed that their ruler was very brother to God himself, that "Even covered with boils, our Czar would know not ill health"; that "The Czar, riding behind a tired horse, changes each dragging step to a league"; that "The Czar's voice has an echo, though no mountains may be near." But the days of these loyal superstitions are past and gone. The proverbs of the peasantry of to-day ring with other truths, as if, ten years ago, when these sayings first began to appear in the current speech of the poor, there were cryptic prophecies of a people's congress to mark the death of autocracy.

Besides the one already quoted, the French writer gives eight such sayings as follows:

Even the lungs of the Czar cannot blow out the sun.
The Czar's back, too, would bleed, if it were gnashed with the knout.
The Czar's arm is long, but it cannot reach Heaven.
The Czar's vinegar makes nothing the sweeter.
The hand of a Czar has but five fingers, after all.
It is no more difficult for Death to carry a fat Czar than a lean beggar.
What the Czar cannot accomplish, Time does easily.
Even the Czar's cow cannot bring to the world anything but a calf.

Why Remain Short and Stunted When You May Learn Free How to Grow Tall?

No Matter How Short You Are or What Your Age, You Can Increase Your Height.

No new discovery has attracted more attention in the scientific world than that made by K. Leo Minges, of Rochester, N. Y.
